

A Note to our Clients About the Coronavirus from CEO Gregg Boyle

Dear PlayMaker Health Clients,

Over the past few days, the news cycle of Coronavirus and the spotlight on the business of post-acute care has taken precedence. From the concerns regarding spread within facilities to educating staff, we're all bracing for the impact this will have within our communities and nationwide.

I want you to know that it is business as usual at PlayMaker Health. Your agency, leadership, and sales teams are our top priority. Our Client Services Specialists, Integration, and Tech Support are all here to provide ongoing and seamless support.

And of course, we're also committed to taking care of our team, too. We've been providing guidance and information along with our flexible work environment to ensure our employees can keep themselves and their families safe. We're encouraging our team to stay home and travel only if it's business-critical.

At the heart of our company is our commitment to deliver the highest level of service we can for our clients, and it's something we take to heart in good times and bad. As a father and leader, my promise to our clients, partners, and employees is to ensure our platform, customer service, and support is steadfast so that you can focus on the health and safety of your patients.

Thank you for your continued trust in us, and please feel free to contact us at any time.

Sincerely,

Gregg Boyle
CEO, PlayMaker Health
